

who is your neighbor?

two sides of a valley

Teton Valley is undeniably a place of breathtaking beauty, where the majestic mountains draw people from all walks of life, seeking the tranquility and wonder of the mountain lifestyle. But beneath this stunning landscape lies a hidden struggle that many residents—both newcomers and those who have lived here for generations—face. For many who call Teton Valley home, making ends meet is a daily challenge. Sky-high housing costs, a mismatch between wages and the cost of living, and the social isolation that can come with living in such a remote area create barriers that make life here far more difficult than it may seem. What was once a dream of opportunity and natural beauty can quickly become a harsh reality for those without the resources to thrive.

“I’ve lived in quite a few communities in my life and I’ve never seen any service quite like the CRC that’s available to help anyone who needs it.”

“The Community Resource Center helped me figure out how to make ends meet when I had limited options for long-term housing. I’m grateful for the Community Resource Center’s understanding and support, because they didn’t give me a handout, they helped me out!”
